

Backpacks and Homework and Papers, Oh My!

Are your kids' backpacks a bottomless pit where things go in but never come out? Do you struggle to get your kids to do their homework on time? Are you overwhelmed with the endless flow of paper into your home?

In this presentation, you'll learn strategies to create order in the sometimes chaotic and often disorganized world of being a parent to school-aged children.

In this interactive presentation, attendees will gain ideas, tips, and proven strategies to create dramatic changes in the following areas:

1. Organizing paperwork

Discover creative ways to tame the endless streams of school papers, artwork, sports schedules, etc. so you can stay on top of things and feel in control.

2. Organizing student spaces

Learn how to apply the fundamental principles of organizing to homework areas, desks, lockers, and backpacks so your kids can devote their energy working efficiently rather than to hunting for lost or forgotten items.

3. Managing time

Determine the best way to keep track of your and your family's appointments, as well as how to help your kids manage their priorities appropriately. We'll review a myriad of ways for them to stay on top of their assignments and the other activities going on in their busy lives.

Key Benefits Attendees will know how to establish systems to manage school-related papers so things don't fall through the cracks, how to create organized storage and study spaces to help their kids work efficiently, and how to create time management systems to help them and their kids manage all of their activities and assignments. They'll also receive a comprehensive handout that will provide lasting guidance on the tools and techniques covered in the presentation.
